But the last one:
the lady who trails her
scent like a
flag of surrender
through your life when
there will be no more
coming after-
oh, that's love by a
different name.
She is the babe you hold in your arms for an hour after she's gone to sleep.
If you put her down in the
crib, she might wake up
changed
and fly away.
So instead you rock by the window, drinking in the
light from her skin,
breathing her exhaled
dreams.
Your heart lays to the double crescent moons of
closed lashes on her
cheeks.
She's the one
you can't put down.
